Tremont Stakes at Gravesend Won by Don D'Oro-Oakley Diamond Stakes Taken by Rosinante.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.-The National Derby is now a thing of the past. It has come and gone, but it will ever be remembered as one of the greatest events ever seen in the West, and Prince Lief as one of the grandest three-year-olds ever seen. At 1 o'clock the crowd began to arrive. The heat, though intense and unrelieved by the light breeze, was not as oppressive as on the downtown streets. Fully 29,000 people passed the turnstiles, half of them ladies in holiday attire, who endured the long wait, in exchange for the advantageous positions so secured. A brilliant and spirited assembly of "all sorts and conditions" of men and women were present. The track was lightning fast and favorites carried off the

When the bugle called the horses to the post for the big event, the thousands in the grand stand rose to their feet and cast event a $15,000 derby. Summarles: eager glances for their favorite, Prince Lief, to whom, on account of his being the Good Order, 104 (Scherrer), 2 to 1, won; had pinned their faith to keep the rich stake and honor at home. Would be fulfill to "Lucky" Baldwin and the Pacific coast, nor to "Mike" Dwyer and the Atlantic. It must remain here, and a great shout went up when Prince Lief was recognized following the Dwyer entry, third in line of pa-

There was no delay at the post, the horses getting away to a beautiful start, with Argentine in front. Ben Brush. Ben Eder, Captive, Prince Lief Don Carillo and Ramiro following. "Soup" Perkins quickly brought Lief up into the lead and, passing the grand stand, was a length and a half in front of Argentina, followed by Ben Brush, Ben Eder, Don Carillo, Ramiro and Captive, all going easy. At the three-quarter pole Prince Lief was three lengths shead, going like the wind, with Sims, on Brush, going after him, five lengths ahead of Argentina, Ben Eder, Don Carillo and Captive last. At the mile Sims was two ngths back of Perkins, urging Brush, However, at the head of the stretch he had lled Prince Lief's lead down to a nose, t the effort had killed him. He was all but out and Prince Lief gradually drew away. Sims saw he had Prince Lief to beat and used every known art to get his horse up again. It was no use. Perkins was resting easily, watching Sims work. Half way down the stretch Ben Brush nother game effort to reach the fly ng leader, gaining inch by inch, and finall reaching his head, but he faltered and dropped back to the saddle girth; again the game little animal made an effort; slowly but surely he was gaining, but the eeded in reaching Prince Lief's head.

The race was over, and Prince Lief had own himself to be the peer of three-yearwinning easily, never having to be i. The crowd went wild with joy; horse had carried off the prize and he honor would remain at home. Perkins presented with a flower saddle, which laced on the back of Prince Lief and paraded in front of the grand stand amid the wildest enthusiasm. HIRED AS A PRIVATE JESTER. New Profession to Keep the Guests

Amused.

Washington, D. C ...... 76

The latest bit of extravagance perpe trated by the host of a great yachting pary that set out a few days since for a cruise in the Mediterranean was the hiring of an individual to keep the company amused. No such crude word, of course capacity than that of a guest on the pala-tial little steamer; nevertheless, he is paid a salary, and a good one, at that, with the proviso that he furnish amusement whenever the party appear in the least likely to grow dull and bored.

Mr. Blank, being young, vivacious, anxious to see Europe, and glad to earn money, board with him a lot of musical instruments, a wonderful stock of jokes, all the proper paraphernalia for private theatricals, and an amazing fund of high spirits. He had a scheme of entertainment mapped out for every day; he guaranteed his conversation never to flag and grow monotonous, his stories never to be repeated, and his good humor never to be ruffled. Mr. Blank's nearest rival is a young girl bright, pretty and accomplished, who last winter accepted a salary to accompany a party on a private car through the South and West: She drew the tidy little wages of $50 a week and had all her expenses paid; but they say she earned her money, for she kept the whole carload of blase and rich folks in an amazing good humor for the entire six weeks. At the end of her trip she was snapped up for a country house party, but at the end of that visit, his best efforts could not shake off the big son of Rayon D'Or, who was eating into his short lead. Suddenly, Don D'Oro felt the steel and he jumped away with a mighty played tricks and hanjos, drawn funny pictures, etc., until she tottered on the verge ngth and a half in the lead and Griffin of nervous prostration, but she says it is a him up for any final rush that the well-paid profession and a growing one, might have left in him, but there Rich Americans find it harder every year Friar might have left in him, but there was no rush. PERFECT FIELDING And Damon's Steadiness Won the Game for Indianapolis.

special to the Indianapolis Journal. GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 20 .- The champions won an easy game this afternoon, hitting McFarland at opportune times and playing an errorless game full of hazardous risks and long chances, allof which were accepted with a rush. Mc-Farland, the home team's newest pitcher from Chicago, was very wild and not a particularly hard proposition at best. Damon, while he was hit nearly as hard as his opponent, was steadier and kept hits so well scattered that the best the locals could do was to gather in three runs, two of those coming in after Damon had won his game and commenced to pitch a little easier. Much of the Hoosiers' fielding was of a sensational nature, Motz and McCar- St. Louis and is going to take advantage thy distinguishing themselves in long running catches.

The crowd was large and very boisterous, several hundred dollars' worth of giant firecrackers being used to rattle Damon. It was money thrown away, though the bleachers had a lot of fun throwing crackers behind Hogriever while he was on the coaching lines. The firecrackers contained a small quantity of dynamite and made a report like a cannon.

In the second inning Roat and Stewart singled, bases were given to Motz and Hogan, and, with the bases full and no one out, Parrott made a wild throw that cleared the bags. Damon's single and Wheelock's error gave one run in the fourth inning, while the one in the fifth was scored on Schiebeck's single, a base on balls to Motz and Parrott's second error. Hits were neatly bunched in the sixth inning, singles by Roat, Motz and Hogan, with a double by Buckley and an error by Gettinger that stretched a good single into a three bagger, netting three runs. Hogriever's three-inse hit drove in a run in the seventh, while a base on balls, a wild pitch and Buckley's single netted one in the eighth. Smink batted in one of Grand Rapids's runs, two singles after a base on balls netted one, and one was batted in in the eighth inning. Attendance, 1,005. Score: Grand Rapids. A.B. R. H. O.

The record of the present season shows that batting has gone far ahead of the pitching, and that if the pitcher is to continue a prominent factor in the game, the rules will have to undergo a change, regulating the attack and the defense. Still, the public is not, as yet, hungry for a change in the rules, and it is to be hoped that the magnates will think twice before altering The pitching find of the season in the

How Their Financial Relations to the Mother Country Are Arranged.

A nation, like an individual, can not be entirely independent unless it is self-sup-porting. It should not mortgage either its present or its future to others in obtaining the means for its current support. So far as is possible a colonial system should be financially self-sustaining. This is, in the main, true of the English colonies. In the years 1894-95, comparatively unfavorable years, the expenses of the empire exceeded the revenue. The United Kingdom, taken alone, gave a handsome surplus. British India showed an eyen greater deficit. Of the English colonies in Asia only the Straits settlements yielded a larger revenue than the expenses of local government. nue than the expenses of local government demanded. Australasia, which has pos-sessed government for a sufficient time to have attained consistency, expended more that $2,000,000 in excess of the revenue. The Dominion of Canada, open to objection as have been some of its measures of internal improvement, is testing their value by a deficit. The colonies of Africa, among the a revenue equal to their needs. It requires nearly $490,000,000 a year to pay the administrative expesses of the British Empire outside of the United Kingdom, and the actual expenditures are nearly $9,000,000

These sums may be taken as representing the current expense of the English colonies. Over and above this sum extensive use has een made of credit, as well to construct works of public improvement as to meet the expenses of war, an expedition, or a deficit in the revenues. The debt of the colonies of Great Britain represents a capital of $2.200,000,000, on which the interest charge would be at least $120,000,000 a year, or about one-fourth of the total expenditures of the iles. While this debt may constitute a bond between colony and English people, who have for the most part advanced the money, it does not constitute an immediate charge on the English exchequer. It is a burden on the colony, and this question of colonial finance is one that involves extreme difficulties. The populations of most of these dependencies are native populations, having made little advances in civilization, and of limted means and few wants easily supplied. A direct tax upon land or wealth would be difficult of assessment and of collection. It is by direct taxation that the greater part of colonial revenues is raised. Duties on imports and duties on consumption constitute the main features of colonial tax systems. And so free have the colonies been left to their own devices that they have been permitted to frame and enforce tax systems in direct opposition to the princi-ples which control the home government in matters of finance-systems which affect the trade of the mother country more severely and injuriously than that of any other, and consequently competing power.

Hereditary Diseases. New York Ledger.

At last, after fighting off the subject for many years, the scientist has been forced to the conclusion that many diseases that appear to be so are by no means hereditary. They have found that the tendency to a disease may be transmitted, but in maladies like tuberculosis there is no good reason to believe that the germs are implanted in the child's system by the parent. It has been shown that germs born with the child will either develop into true tuberculosis or will be destroyed by the health-giving forces of the system. Much stress has been laid upon the fact that whole families die of consumption almost immediately upon reaching their majority. It is said that, of course, this disease must be hereditary, but this is only a superficial view of the case. It can easily be shown that environment has much to do with this | St. Louis Special. apparent heredity. As just stated, the conons and tendencies are hereditary. If the parent has tuberculosis, all the children ought, according to naturally accepted no-tions, to fall victims to this dread disease. But we frequently see cases in which one or more children may die before reaching maturity, while others never show any symptoms whatever of tuberculous conditions. This proves that the germs may have been very active in the one case and lacking in the other. Be that as it may, it is high time that the hereditary scare should be done away with, and that people with weak minds and weaker lungs and ple with weak minus and weaker lungs and throats should spend much of their time in warm weather in riding, driving, long walks and boating, although the latter is not considered so healthful as the wheel, or other forms of exercise that take one upon higher ground and out of reach of possible malarial districts.
